WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 10, 1879.

THE interest manifested in the orphan children of the late General J. B. Hood is in every way creditable to the Southern people. The movement to get up a fund for their support by private contributions, originated with the Atlanta Constitution, one of the best newspapers in the South, and we are glad to see that it is being responded to from If his audience was composed of all parts of the Sonth. Our sympathy for the bereaved orphans is heightened, no doubt, by the fact that the General spent last summer in East Tennessee at Tate Spring, and we know something personally of his children. We trust the benevolent people all over the country will respond to this call for charity until a fund has been raised sufficient to place these helpless orphans above want.

THE Democratic party in the United States is in a great strait. A majority of the leaders do not want to nominate Samuel J. Tilden for President next year, and yet they fear not to. They have no love for the great reformer, but a great deal of fear. It is a conflict between their desires and their fears, but the chance for success, unless they can den wills it. This is the situation. Tilden is a tyrant. He knows where his power lies, and he does not hesitate to use it. He has the Democratic party by the throat, and it dare not go contrary to his wishes, for fear he may tighten his grasp and squeeze the life out of its carcass. It may submit to his dictation with a bare chance for life. It may defy him and meet certain de-
